Oncology

Dr. Molly Gasparini was born and raised just outside of Orlando, FL. She earned her Bachelor's degree in Biological Science from Florida State University (go Noles!) and later pursued a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine and a Master of Public Health from the University of Florida.

Following veterinary school, Dr. Gasparini completed a rotating internship at The Ohio State University and a medical oncology internship at Colorado State University. She then undertook a three-year medical oncology residency and Master of Science program, focusing on cancer incidence and laboratory tumor lysis syndrome in dogs.

Dr. Gasparini is passionate about oncology and values the connections she forms with her patients and their owners. In her leisure time, she indulges in sports, especially college football, and cherishes moments with her fiancé, dogs, Clementine, Landy, and Berkeley, as well as her cat, Bee.
